PICK JURY 'SHEIK' COPPER IS STOKES DIVORCE

Women Barred From Courtroom as Sensational Case Opens in New York

Such rapid progress was made at the start of the trial that the jury box was filled at 11:15 a. m. all named by Stokes' attorneys.

Stokes' attorneys, counsel for Mrs. Stokes, then began examination. Stokes is under bond in Chicago on grand jury indictments charging a conspiracy to defame his wife. He has seventy witnesses, prepared to appear in Supreme Court to prove his claim. Mrs. Stokes, with her Chicago attorney, Chas. E. Bristol, and Samuel Untermyer, of New York, announced herself ready to defend her name, and demand her share of the Stokes millions for her two children.

This is the second trial of the case. Mrs. Stokes won in her first suit. The decision was set aside, however when it was discovered that the presiding judge had failed to give the decree before leaving the Supreme Court bench for a post in the appellate division.

Stokes is said to have spent $200,000 in gathering evidence. He has 12,000 pages of what he alleges to be proof that his wife is not a fit person to have the custody of the couple's two children.
Bristol will cross-examine respondents in his suit. They

A Boston patrolman was slain in cold blood today by two thugs in the rear of the Lemo street—burns, Columbus avenue. He is dying at City Hospital.

He is John J. McCalligan of the Fishery Coast station. One shot over as he withdrew to his hospital bed he murmured, "Oh, God! I don't know why they did it. I don't deserve it."

It is described as the most brutal, cold-blooded shooting that has occurred in years. The assailants were two men, escaped.

ONE SEEMED DRUNK
McCalligan ran across the men, turned against a board fence as he tried to escape in the neighbor hood at twelve this morning. One seemed to be drunk. He was shot and died. His companion was not seen.

HUB BUYS 250,000,000 BUSG MARKS
Boston has bought 250,000,000 busg marks in the past two weeks. Boston has paid $2,500 for the privilege of buying these worthless marks from street hawkers. The National Shawmut Bank, through their foreign exchange, is selling them at 20 cents a million. These marks could have been purchased for less than one-third of the price paid for them by public citizens. Seven hundred and fifty dollars would have paid for the entire amount of marks bought. Yet the people of Boston were willing to give to unscrupulous hawkers $2,500.

WIRE FENCE FOR LLOYD-GEORGE PARK STOPS BROOKLINE

The erection of a wire fence to Longwood Park, Brookline, has aroused civic strife in that exclusive town.

On the one side in the controversy are the Park Commissioners, who argue that the erection of the fence will prevent children from converting the park into a playground. The use of the gift of the park to the town, they explain, provided that, in the event the park became a playground, it would revert to the heirs of the donor, the late David Sears.

Opposed to them are abutters and property owners in the neighborhood, who oppose the erection of the fence will ruin the beauty of the park.

PROTEST UNLIGHTEENESS.
Dr. Edwin Jackson of Beach road, said "It is decidedly opposed to the movement of the park department. It is absolutely unnecessary and will be unadvisable. The persons who are to gaze upon it each time they leave their homes or look from their windows ought to have been considered at least."

Former School Committee member William H. Lincoln, said, "Naturally the residents are much exercised over the erection of the fence. They are of the opinion that it is going to disfigure the park, which they have enjoyed for many years. Protest is to be made to the park commissioners."

"EVERYONE INCENSED."
Mrs. Samuel C. Payson of No. 48 Beach road, said, "We are much opposed to the erection of this fence. It is deliberately disfiguring the park to place such a fence. Everyone is incensed."

Mrs. Edwin J. Dreyfus of No. 34 Beach road said the fence spoiled the whole park and she was opposed to it.

Miss Helen Hood of No. 22 Bond street said she did not like to see the park in the park. "I approve of anything," she said, "that will prevent persons crowding and keeping the children from playing there. I don't know how the fence is going to look. I can't say that I will like or dislike it, until it is completed. I favor making the park open to the public and the children to come and play there."

AUTO HITS HYDRANT

The water which quashed from the hydrant covered the car. With the help of residents nearby, Mr. and Mrs. Smith were rescued. Mrs. Smith was cut and her husband's hands were also cut. The car was a total loss.

BEAUTY'S SECRETLY MARRIED

Becomes Bride of Poet in Romance of New York's Literary Colony

New York, Oct. 8.—A third romance in the life of Mrs. Elinoir Hichborn Wylie was revealed today. Mrs. Wylie, who is a poet, was married to William Rose Benet, also a poet.

One of the belles of Washington official society where her father, Henry M. Hoyt, was solicitor-general under President Taft, Elinoir Hoyt made a love match with Philip S. Hichborn, wealthy lawyer and writer, now married her in 1908.

Four years later Mrs. Hichborn eloped to Europe with Horace Wylie Hichborn, the son of an admiral, committed suicide.

In 1918, Mrs. Wylie got a divorce and Mrs. Hichborn, who had been living in Europe with Wylie and their three children, was married to him.

But he left her and in 1919 she divorced him and came to New York to take up literary work.

Mrs. Benet's brother, Henry M. Hoyt, killed himself shortly after her first husband shot him.

Last June her younger sister, Miss Nancy Hoyt, popular Washington debutante, refused to wed Lieutenant Frederick Wieman Clarke of the British royal navy, a few hours before the ceremony was to have taken place.

It was at first rumored that the prospective bridegroom's parents had stopped the ceremony when they learned of Mrs. Benet's past.

But it was later learned that Miss Nancy, her self, had been afraid that she might scandalize her sister's example.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—"I intend to remain with my husband, whatever the consequences," declares Mrs. Reginald Davies, only daughter of General Widdshire, who a few days ago caused a sensation by announcing the news of her marriage to her father's valet.

When the marriage was first announced it was stated that General Widdshire, who lives in Montemoreux, had consented. Later, however, it developed that Mrs. Widdshire, who is twenty-three and who will receive £200,000 when she is twenty-five, had been married secretly six weeks.

General Widdshire declares that he never consented to the marriage and does not approve thereof.

EX-RANGER KILLS SELF WITH GUN

Dorchester Man's Suicide Is Mystery: Leaves Wife and 3 Children

A few years back Elias J. Khouri and his beautiful young fiancée were prize dancers, well known about Greater Boston.

They married and three sons were children as pretty as their mother.

Today white mother and kiddie lay sleeping. Khouri shot himself through the head at No. 29 Norfolk street and died within thirty minutes.

Mystery surrounds the suicide. Police say he was in financial difficulties owing to overreaching himself in a fruit store venture at Milton avenue and Norfolk street, Dorchester.

This his wife denies. Neighbors say the man died of cancer and refusing to speak to his wife.

With her babies she stood wept at his bedside. "Speak to me," she cried, "speak to me." Neighbors summoned by the frantic wife when the pistol shot echoed through the house the family occupied, saw the husband jump his head to the wall, close his lips and die.

Charles Kurker, neighbor, said that he saw Khouri shot himself. Khouri had awakened him and his family at about 10 o'clock.

"I know of no reason for his act," Mrs. Khouri said. "We were happy together and never had trouble."

It was learned that Khouri, although a quiet, hardworking man, was of an intensely excitable nature when aroused.

Khouri's young wife was only fifteen years old when the dancing couple were married five years ago and Khouri was eighteen. Their eldest child, Mary, is four years old. Charles is three and Alice a year and six months.

Khouri, an Armenian, had been in the country about nine years. According to his business partner, he was not in debt and was making money.

SEES DANGER TO WOMEN IN BUSINESS

"DOMESTIC DRUDGE" FAR HAPPIER, SAYS MERCHANT

The so-called domestic drudge with a husband, children and home of her own is far better off in life than the most successful business woman.

John Jay Edson, chairman of the Board of the Washington Loan and Trust Co. of Washington, D. C., and secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, believes that woman's ideal position is providing for the making of an American home.

Mr. Edson, who is a veteran member of the Chamber, which met in Boston, said when he first came to Washington 10 years ago he was employed in Government of finance, stores, or as stenographer and typewriter.

CONSTITUTE DANGER.

"The best homes in the world are right here in America," said Mr. Edson seriously, "but the number of women crowding into business is a danger in many ways. Some women are beginning to look down on home duties and home making."

"The most unhappy and lonely women in our acquaintance," Mr. Edson went on eagerly, "are the busy women that are considered the world to have made successful careers at the sacrifice of a home and little children. They are not so well off as they think they are. They are too late and their business trip through Europe or small can do nothing to fill the void loneliness."

Autumn Modes

Paris and "The Street"

OUR great wide street we love to stroll along upon; and the joy of it is to just window shop and observe the life of the street. The influence of Chinese, Persian, Russian, Spanish in the new mode for autumn overabundance the strong tendency Paris suggests for all black and grey was it more important that your mourning be correct. A house, famous for its style and values, is showing a smart, little tail mourning two-piece suit—short coat, very youthful in line. Mourning accessories very distinctive. From this house, too, comes a new hat, a new hat in colors, showing all the new seth colors.

PROMINENT on the thoroughfare is a house of furs. Here truly one sees the new, authentic style and quality fur. Many are made of seal with contrasting fur for the new circular coat, voluminous sleeves and brilliant linings. Jauntly sport models in more hairy furs. Here is a house that is both reliable and reasonable—perhaps in nothing do we require the security of a satisfactory more than in the purchase of fur.

COIFFURES at the opening of two of the shops mentioned were the newer modes in hair-dress. The simple, smoothly brushed effect in "bob" cut, straight across the back of the neck or quaint, closely curled, little knobs of well-groomed effect.

THE STREET prides itself on its shoe houses. Nothing marks the well-dressed woman more than the wise and appropriate selection of her footwear. One well-known shoe commands itself to you because of its natural foot-fitting qualities—insuring and maintaining foot comfort. An outstanding shoe interprets fashion's new set with its interlocking strap decorations and elegant classic goings—new smart new patent leather oxford and all the new and dainty in matching children's slippers.

NEWBURY STREET—off the little Garden—prides the only shop of its kind in a real French Parisian. Clever this woman who assembles her own perfume, blends for you delicate odors making the uniqueness of the subtle fragrance and specialties in all the pleasing dressing table accessories.

In my mind is a very famous and walk-in method of reducing, one very worth commending up fully; shall I tell you more of it next Monday on this page?

BOSTON BABIES OVERNOURISHED, HEALTH CRITICS CLAIM

WEIGH TON MUCH, SAY DOCTORS

One Tuberculosis Case and
One of Heart Disease Found
Among Entrees

Boston babies are overnourished—they weigh too much. This fact has been established by the examination of the first eighty babies in the Better Babies Conference at the Boston Health Show at Mechanics Building.

Only one baby was excluded from the examination room. The little one had a bad cold.

RECHECKING TODAY. Today the checking and re-checking of the score cards of the first eighty was completed and the commencement was made of the highest scoring babies.

Dr. Carlton G. Percy was the consulting physician for Sunday. He advised all the mothers and kept at his duties from 1:45 o'clock to 4:00 p. m. Some of the mothers arrived as early as one o'clock for appointments that called for their appearance as late as four o'clock. The physicians in charge prefer that the mothers present themselves only a few minutes ahead of their appointment time.

The examinations entertained and instructed a large and constantly changing group of men, women and children who watched the white-robed physicians and nurses through the windows of the baby houses.

The examinations will be continued today and throughout each afternoon of the show which ends Saturday evening, Oct. 13. After that time the babies entered and not taken care of will be in the capable hands of the City and State Health departments.

ONE TUBERCULOSIS CASE. Next to the baby conference the public seemed most interested in the tuberculosis clinics, the present, the many opportunities to obtain free medical advice and examination, the addresses on health and the playground activities.

For the tuberculosis clinics, Miss Bernice W. Billings, executive secretary of the Boston Tuberculosis Association, reports the finding of one active case of the disease and five suspects in the fifty examined, with two cases of bronchitis and one heart disease case. This is an excellent showing, the finding of cases that ought to be known to the authorities.

If the high character of the first of the addresses to be delivered by Paul Revere Hall is maintained throughout the series the hall should be packed to the doors. The speakers in order of their appearance were Mrs. Elizabeth M. Donald, housekeeping editor of the Modern Housewife; Mrs. Doris Thompson Lufkin, formerly editor of American Motherhood; Dr. William H. Robery of the Harvard Medical School and Professor C. B. A. Winslow of Yale.

Today's program includes the baby conference from 2 to 5:30; address in the Parenthood Institute on "The Girl" by Miss Dorothy Williamson, physical director Health Department; Jordan Marsh Company; and Miss Anna Weinreich, commissioner of correction, U. S. Department of Labor, Washington, D. C. Demonstration by the Boston Playgroup Association, motion pictures, A. Brown, life-saving demonstrations under water, a great exhibition of parallel bar evolutions drill and dances by the Y. M. C. A. The historic health pageant, with Bertha Bragdon, and an address on Community Dancing, by Joseph Lee of the Community Service.

ONE WAY ROUTE ON TREMONT ST. PROPOSED

TRAFFIC SUGGESTION NO. 18. The American prints today another in the series of suggestions with relation to the simplifying of Boston's acute traffic problem. The correspondent proposes that the citizens in general "get together" with the city officials to work out general plans of relief.

In the meantime the correspondent suggests that Tremont street be made a one-way highway and that automobiles be taken off Washington street, "giving the people a chance to have one street to themselves without their lives being endangered."

"The only big solution I see at this time," says the correspondent, "is to adopt the Mayor's idea of a broad boulevard that will take up from the north to the south of Boston, Channing street will have to be widened in time when Stuart street is completed."

"All statutes and books over subway stations should be taken from the bookshelves and that grand old edifice, the old State House, stands in the way and blocks traffic, making it one of the most dangerous spots in Boston."

What do you say? Write us.

TRAFFIC SUGGESTION NO. 11

Another correspondent would have all slow-moving vehicles numbered and their drivers fined for not keeping to the nearest possible line along the right hand curb.

"No vehicle," says this correspondent, "has a right to move very rapidly in congested districts, but everyone is entitled to drive a car at a speed that will enable him to keep his motor running at a reasonably economical speed."

"All slow-moving vehicles should be numbered and liable to a fine if they occupy any part of a street but the nearest possible to the right hand curb. Motorists should be encouraged to report by mail violations of this rule, and if the owner is reported several times he should be notified by the police who would keep a watch for the number."

If the vehicle finally is caught, the record of the owner's violations should be added to the evidence in hand."

More adequate direction of street traffic, absence of which contributes to traffic dangers by confused routes, stopping and starting, and to the danger to the public, should be taken to overcome too much "haphazard" driving by this order.

What do you say? Write us.

MAN IS DYING OF HYDE PARK PUPILS MYSTERY SHOTS GO HOME, COLD

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 8.—Two shots from the darkness wounded John Minor, fifty-six years old, a carpenter, as he wandered through the woods near Fawcett avenue, Fitchburg, Mass., today. He fell with what physicians say may be mortal wounds.

A man and a woman who occupy the house nearby are mysteriously missing. The man's hat was found in the front yard. A front window was broken. Police believe the shot-gun was fired through the glass. That is Film

That dingy coat which hides the beauty of your teeth

A large percentage of people still let film hide the beauty of their teeth. Yet millions know how to combat it. Look about you. Note the pearly teeth you see in every circle now. Mark what they add to beauty and to charm. Then let this pleasant reveal how multitudes now get them.

A dainty habit
Film is that vicious coat you feel. Much of it clings and stays when you brush teeth in the ordinary way. It becomes discolored more or less, then forms dingy coats. That is how teeth lose luster. Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. That is why tooth troubles are so common. Gums breed by millions in film. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. And that is alarmingly common.

Now dental science has found ways to combat film. One acts to disintegrate the film at all stages of formation. One to remove it without harmful scouring.

A new crusade
There is now a world-wide crusade for better tooth protection. And Pepsodent is a leading factor in it. It does more than fight film. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva—the neutralizer of mouth acids. It multiplies the starch digestion.

Protect the Enamel
Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combant which contains harsh grits.

Now dental science has found ways to combat film. One acts to disintegrate the film at all stages of formation. One to remove it without harmful scouring.

gent in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits on teeth. Every use of Pepsodent gives manifold power to these great tooth-protecting agents in the mouth. It is bringing to people of all races a new dental era.

New beauty comes, and quickly

The benefits of Pepsodent are quick and apparent. You see and feel them from the start. When you once know them you will never return to methods of the past. Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. NICK FLATLEY PICKS GIANTS TO BEAT YANKEES IN SERIES

THE ARE BETTER CLUB

By Nick Flatley

Another world series is just about to take the edge off European wars, and football, and the epic of coal, and similar important matters and once again we find ourselves wondering whether the managerial genius of John J. McGraw will outweigh the class of American League pitching.

Last time, as any doubt, we are willing to announce here that the New York Giants are about to win their third successive world title. They enter this series at the odds of 10 to 1. They haven't had real pitching all year. They're not supposed to since they've been used to ease into the series.

There but a reason in the world to support the Giant cause. They had a terrific time winning in their own league. While the Yankees were riding roughshod over their opponents, the Giants were winning the series by a landslide. They had a record of 100 wins and 50 losses, while the Yankees had a record of 90 wins and 60 losses.

Yankee pitchers had great luck, all five of them. They had a record of 100 wins and 50 losses, while the Yankees had a record of 90 wins and 60 losses. They had a record of 100 wins and 50 losses, while the Yankees had a record of 90 wins and 60 losses.

But it's a fairly large but, the class of pitchers as much as the class of pitchers. They had a record of 100 wins and 50 losses, while the Yankees had a record of 90 wins and 60 losses. They had a record of 100 wins and 50 losses, while the Yankees had a record of 90 wins and 60 losses.

The Yankees had the tag to their parade, moved up away back in July. The rest of the season was a parade for them. They haven't been pressed since last fall when the pressure blew them into a million distinct fragments.

Whereas we have a team that has fought through a set campaign, mingling with a club that had to take the hard battle of the championship. They had a record of 100 wins and 50 losses, while the Yankees had a record of 90 wins and 60 losses.

That to put it briefly, sums up the impending series. The Yankees, favorites for two successive years, have taken down the Yankees. In their hands they must mark the idea that the Giants have won the series. They had a record of 100 wins and 50 losses, while the Yankees had a record of 90 wins and 60 losses.

Magnificent Head of Papyrus, the British Turf King

Stock of nerves that will not help to the least. Getting down to the baseball facts, the Giants, apart from pitching, are far and away the better ball club. Offensively as well as defensively, they stand over their rivals. They have speed and imagination, two essentials that are miserably lacking in the A. L. roster.

Throughout the season, the Yankees have been the favorites. They had a record of 100 wins and 50 losses, while the Yankees had a record of 90 wins and 60 losses. They had a record of 100 wins and 50 losses, while the Yankees had a record of 90 wins and 60 losses.

B. G. READY FOR BIG GAME WITH FORDHAM BOYS

After a "wet week" (that's the slang for a week of no rain) the football team will face Fordham University at Braves Field on October 12, Columbus Day.

Fordham has been a team in the South, and it is a team in the South. They had a record of 100 wins and 50 losses, while the Yankees had a record of 90 wins and 60 losses.

Chuck Darling, last season's losing streak that has lasted five years ago.

Last year's game with Boston College was played the week after Fordham won their last game. They had a record of 100 wins and 50 losses, while the Yankees had a record of 90 wins and 60 losses.

Fordham will therefore come fresh to Boston with a team entered about Myers, the clever back. Myers was the captain of last year's team, and almost the whole of the New York club.

Myers is a sure thing. He is a forward pass but lacks the kicking touch of a kicker.

SHANNON FANS FOR THE POST

Paul is baseball editor of the Post—a position which he has held down for several years—covering games and things. But Paul, like some of the other handsome young experts, is inclined to get a bit careless at times. He sometimes aims at the high ones—and strikes out.

Paul "fanned" on a beautiful bit of baseball scandal last week—the story on the investigation of the Braves and the Red Sox—which was an American exclusive.

Paul missed it by a mile; but he came back in real baseball fashion with a sweeping denial of practically every assertion in the story.

Knowing a few things about the inside workings of a newspaper office, Paul's "follow up" story was written to square himself after his session "on the carpet" for being scooped.

Here are a few facts Paul overlooked in "pampering" the story. It did not "come from New York." It is a local story.

The petition is now in the hands of District Attorney O'Brien, and his investigators have been at work for more than a week.

The Tragic Flight of the War Hero Who Goes Wrong

The "Showdown" in Galsworthy's Play, "Loyalties," When Capt. Ronny Dancy, the War Hero, at Right, Realizes He Can No Longer Conceal His Theft of the 1909 Found Note.

The Strange Case of Capt. Friend and the Beauty's Bracelet Calls Science's Attention to Other Men of Valor Accused of Preying on Society

Mrs. Diana Norman, the Beautiful Widow, Whose Friendship with Dashing Capt. Friend Was Ruffled When She Accused Him of Taking Her Costly Bracelet.

He Saw Me Put My Jewelry in a Drawer as My Dressing Table. . . When I Prepared to Go Out the Bracelet Was Missing.

WHAT is the psychology of the war hero who goes wrong? Very often he is a member of the so-called leisured class, in America, or more likely, in England or on the Continent—where the leisured class is a definite, fenced-off entity. Why is it that some men who give such splendid accounts of themselves in the amazing struggle of armed conflict fall down utterly when confronted by the lesser demands of peace? Is it because they have remained keyed up to the stirring war times and can't accustom themselves to the humdrum aftermath of peace? Is it because they have never learned how to make a living, because they are members of the leisured class? These questions are now engaging the attention of neurologists throughout the world, these scientists who are devoting a good part of their time to studying the after-effects of the war on the nerves. For a number of sensational cases of war heroes who have gone wrong have cropped up recently.

There is, in particular, the case of the Britisher, Captain Maurice Friend of the Second Dragon Guards, who recently pleaded guilty in New York to the theft of a $4,000 platinum and diamond bracelet belonging to Mrs. Diana Norman, a beautiful widow. But after his plea had been entered in court and he had spent days in the Tombs prison thinking it over he changed his story and declared the bracelet had been given him by Mrs. Norman because he was out of funds pending the arrival of a remittance from London. There is Edgar H. Loveridge, a twenty-seven year old former major, of Orange, N. J., said to be a West Point graduate. Loveridge did not need money, and when charged, with another man, with robbing the houses of very rich people at Far Hills, N. J., he calmly explained, according to the police, that he had done it "merely for the romance and excitement of the thing."

There is Lieutenant Colonel Charles Glenn Collins, another Britisher with a splendid record in France and Gallipoli, who was recently extradited from New Orleans to Bombay, India, after a three-year court battle, to answer a charge of obtaining a costly pearl necklace under false pretences. Behind Colonel Collins is a long record of previous failures to adjust himself with the economic factors of peace times.

So it goes. One might cite numerous other cases of the plights of war heroes who have gone wrong. John Galsworthy, in his recent play, "Loyalties," gave the subject a searching analysis. In the play, the plot of society, who is "broke" and steals one thousand pounds, is Captain Ronny Dancy, D. S. O. Says one of the characters: "Such people simply can't live without danger. There's no excitement going, they'll make it, out of sheer craving. I've seen Ronny do the wildest things for no mortal reason except the fact that he was bored."

"Where you in the war?"

"Yes."

"How can you stick this? You get no excitement from your end to your end. It's drive me mad!"

Recently the writer was talking over the dinner table to a friend who had just come from England to the United States on a visit. This man, who had made a brilliant record in the war, chanced to say: "It's devilish difficult making a living between wars." And he went on to explain that it was hopeless making a living back home and seemed just as hard to get a job on this side of the Atlantic. Also, he felt that he couldn't settle down to a humdrum job; whatever he did must have some excitement to it.

Now, of course, this man is the soul of honor; there is not a stain to his name and no likelihood of his going wrong. For all his need and his love of excitement he has a keen moral sense. But one can't help but think of the other war heroes who have become involved in scandal. Undoubtedly there is more than mere craving for excitement that drives many of them from the straight and narrow path. Before the war, in Europe there was a leisured class. Young men of good education often had just enough money to hunt a little, to shoot a little, to travel abroad, perhaps go on big game hunting expeditions.

After the war they find that income gone. They have had no business training or experience to get a job. Perhaps they only tried half-heartedly to get one. Around them on all sides they see evidences of great wealth, passed from their hands into the hands of others, unaccustomed, maybe, to using it. "Looters," Capt. Dancy calls them, "or was only looting a looter."

While they were risking their lives at the front, these others were accumulating vast wealth. These old and somewhat frail members of the leisured class have not the money to settle down and begin all over again in what is to them another world.

Take the cases mentioned at the beginning of this article. The case of Captain Maurice Friend of robbing her, told in court was as follows:

"I met Captain Friend early in the year. He told me of his wonderful war service and we became great friends. He visited me in my apartment and took me out on many occasions."

"Early in March I visited in Boston, and Capt.

Friend met me on my return. He was present in my apartment when my maid unpacked my trappings.

European Edition, Boston, 1919.

He saw me put my jewelry in a drawer in my dressing table. He asked me to accompany him on a drive the next day. When I prepared to go out I discovered my bracelet was missing. I did not suspect him until several days later when I exchanged a $950 check for him, he claiming he was temporarily out of funds. His check came back as good."

Why, if Mrs. Norman's story is correct, did Capt. Friend risk his good name and reputation for a paltry $4,000? Nay, less, for he cannot have disposed of the bracelet for anything approaching this sum at a pawn shop.

The case of Colonel Collins is one of the most interesting, because his escapades date clear back to the aftermath of the Boer War, in which conflict he made a splendid record. He has had an amazing career in America, marrying two heiresses, the former Miss Natalie Schenck and Miss Amelia Wheeler, the daughter of Samuel H. Wheeler, New England sewing machine magnate. Both these women divorced him. He is said to have been a personal friend of King George V., and in the old days was feted by American society.

When the World War broke out he was involved in some monetary trouble with a woman, a school teacher, who charged that he had stolen $122 from her. This was paid up and he went abroad to fight for his country. He joined his old regiment, the Cameron Highlanders, which he had left years before because of money difficulties. He was wounded at Gallipoli and gassed and seriously wounded in France.

Then the war ended. And we find Colonel Collins becoming friendly with a brother officer's wife. The officer, Captain Douglas Muntz, got a divorce and Collins married the woman and went to India. The two drifted to Bombay, where he is said to have made extensive purchases of jewelry from Hindu pearl dealers. But the checks he gave are reported to have come back marked "no funds." After Collins brought the jewelry to the United States.

Again the handsome war hero was on the rocks, and although friends supplied him with money to fight the extradition proceedings, his defense finally failed.

With Colonel Collins, as with Captain Friend women played an important part in the escapades. So it was with another war hero when the writer heard of recently. This man who performed almost incredible feats of daring in Syria and Turkey and during the Gallipoli campaign, seems to have spent his time since in excluding women, one after the other, using methods, such as climbing up the wall to the eleventh story of an apartment house to enter the room of a lady in whom he was interested, methods calculated not only to appeal to the romantic nature of the lady in question, but precisely on a par with his daring exploits against and among the Turks.

Such a one undoubtedly was Robert Le Clerq Rivett-Carnac, recently sentenced to three years in prison in London. Ever since 1906 this man has been preying on women and girls, usually being engaged to five or six at a time. He specialized on society women or landlady's daughters, any woman, provided she had some money he could squeeze out of her. As his success with women was amazing. He was not particularly good looking, but seems to have had some hypnotic power over them with his deep voice, powerful build and history of military achievement. Among his many victims were two prominent authoresses.

But it is not with a thorough rogue like Rivett-Carnac or a man like Colonel Collins one sympathizes.

Is he a crook? Not really, the psychologists tell us. What he did was done in a moment of reckless bravado, "to quote once more from "Loyalties." "The war," said inconceivable ex-General Canyngham in the same play, "was looted 'form' all over the place. I saw plenty of that myself. And some men have no moral sense." He might have added, "for some women also."

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

A PROMINENT clubwoman says that a man is right as a peck, but he's not essential, and she's correct. He's a luxury, the same as an ice cream soda or a washing machine.

IT'S a handy thing to have around the house to blame when anything goes wrong.

A WIFE has to have somebody to heart out and the average maid won't stand for it any more.

AND most husbands would rather be bespoken intermittently than to pay alimony permanently.

A LOT of women marry just because they're good looking. They don't seem to realize that a meretricious would be more substantial and wouldn't run out on them.

STILL, a statue couldn't be giving you money all the time. NO dame wants a husband that she has to keep in a museum, although that's where a lot of them belong.

IF you married a statue and somebody asked you whether your husband was good, you'd say, "I've standing in Central Park in the middle of a fountain."

AND besides, no girl wants to be married to something she can't argue with.

OF course if you married a statue you'd always be aware of getting the last word. But still, you'd get the first one and the one in between.

ACCORDING to this club woman, a husband is only a toy. That's just the trouble: if he's a good-looking toy, every dame in the neighborhood wants to play with him.

AND the girls are the same now as when they were kids. They get a handsome fellow and then they're not so sure if he's a "dude" or a "dud."

BE SENSIBLE AND OWN YOUR OWN HOME

For years you have paid enough rent to own a home. You are still paying, and making little effort to own your place.

You think you can pay rent for a fine apartment, but you cannot get together enough to make the down payment on a home that you would consider as a permanent abode.

So you continue to follow a course which impoverishes—certainly it is not building you up on a substantial basis.

For the next ten years what will be the sum total of your rent money?

In the next ten years it might mean a home bought and paid for. You try to be clear-headed in more than to own property, when taxes, interest, repairs and insurance are considered.

But do you not realize that the landlord has figured all this and his own interest on investment himself in the rental sum which he asks?

You are paying all these things just the same whether you realize it or not, so be sensible and own your own home.
